

ABSTRACT

A communications module having a “universal” digital section and a detachable antenna section for providing compatibility with multiple communications standards. The antenna section is configured for 5 communications with a specific communications standard, while the “universal” digital section is configured for operation with a plurality of communication standards.